UNCOVERING ROOSEVELT.

If anything had been needed to confirm the conviction that President Roosevelt had betrayed the friends of the railroad rate bill and broken faith with Senators Tillman and Bailey, the evidence would be complete with the statement of ex-Senator Chandler given to Mr. Tillman for use on the floor of the senate.

It will be remembered that Senator Lodge for the president declared he had not referred to Knox, Spooner and Foraker as attempting to defeat the measure he desired. This denial of Lodge's was made on direct authority of the president in Roosevelt's own words.

Naturally, this raises a question of veracity between Chandler, a Republican officeholder, who had conducted the negotiations with the Democrats for Roosevelt, and the chief executive himself. Senator Chandler, in his written statement, says the president used the language attributed to him—and Chandler is the man whom the president trusted to convey his messages to Tillman and Bailey, the man who was trusted by all concerned to act in good faith.

It takes no long memory to recall the fact that Roosevelt has raised similar issues before. No man in public life has been quite so ready to accuse others of falsehood and bad faith.

When Mr. Whitney of Boston quoted the president as favoring tariff revision, the president denied the quotation and abused the Bostonian, although he was and is one of the most highly esteemed citizens of the Bay state.

If this had been the first instance where the president's word was questioned; if he had never raised an issue of the sort before, one might possibly think it was a case of confusion as to words or misinterpretation of a conversation. But, recalling the Parker episode and the Whitney case, remembering the tremendous importance of Chandler's errand, the fact that he has been asked to act for the president in a vital situation, the conclusion is inevitable that the president, finding himself in an awkward situation has chosen to repudiate his own agent and take refuge in abusing the men he had first enlisted as allies and then betrayed.

The corroborative evidence confirms the belief that Chandler quoted Roosevelt correctly. A man who would ask his enemies to waive their party prejudices in order to help in a patriotic cause, and then break faith with them is entitled to no confidence. If he would do this—as he did—he would not hesitate to eat his own words and throw the onus of proof on the men who had literally befriended him.

The act is the more cowardly that Roosevelt's official position gives him an enormous advantage. Though he is just a common man, a common politician, as events prove, his place gives his word with an assumption of truth, protects him from meeting others on a common plane and loads the dice against any opponent he may have. An honorable man would feel the obligation of such a position. Roosevelt has taken a coward's advantage of it. An honorable man, pledged to his opponents in a common cause, would have felt bound to keep faith with them. Roosevelt betrayed them. An honorable man would at least have given fair warning if he meant to surrender.

Roosevelt opened the gates in the dark and sneaked to the Aldrich camp in the night. After megaphoning his own virtues of truth and honor and love for the common people all these years, an honorable man would have felt it necessary to live up to his own proclamations if only for appearance's sake. Roosevelt has discredited every word he has ever uttered in platitudinous oratory—and seems to think he deserves praise for it. Less than two weeks ago he roared with the pompous arrogance of the Pharisee, "the liar is no whit better than the thief," and one wonders now if he remembers his own words.

Meanwhile the Democrats in the senate have kept faith, not only with their own party declarations but with the demands of the whole nation. In unanimous desire to achieve the best thing possible, they agreed to support a measure which a Republican president had stolen bodily from Democratic platforms and let him have such credit as might accrue from popular approval of his act. One of these Democrats, Senator Tillman, must have made a great personal sacrifice to forget his own injuries at Roosevelt's hands long enough to act with him in a matter affecting the national welfare.

For the time being the only reward the Democrats have is the consciousness that they were more patriotic than partisan, better American citizens than politicians. In the end they will have the further satisfaction of knowing that they have aided in exploding about the biggest humbug the American people have worshiped in the history of the country. They have lifted the blanket that covered the trusts and shown Roosevelt, the trust-buster, covering under it, holding Aldrich's hand and wearing the costume of the Knox-Spooner-Foraker reservation Indian.

DONALDSON.

The case of one Donaldson, prize-fight promoter, against the Rev. D. A. Brown whom he accused of perjury, was dismissed yesterday. Nothing else could have been expected. The case grew out of the fact that Brown had sworn to a warrant for Donaldson's arrest charging him with holding or arranging to hold a prize fight in violation of the statutes. The fight was not held and Donaldson seems to have acquired a fool notion that he could utilize the machinery of the courts to gratify a grudge he held against Mr. Brown for stopping his prize-fight.

Very properly the county attorney, the district attorney and the city attorney all disclaimed any desire to prosecute Mr. Brown and nothing was left for the court but to dismiss the case. It seems a pity that the matter should end there. Mr. Brown was doing his duty as he saw it and aiding the officers of the law to do theirs, when he swore out the warrant. It should not be possible for a man of Donaldson's character and calling to annoy a reputable citizen needlessly in this way. At the least there should be some way to separating Salt Lake and Donaldson and making the separation permanent for the city's good. He and his ilk are of no benefit to the community, they are tolerated only so long as they are innocuous, and he has passed the innocuous stage. Also, he has succeeded in convincing the whole community that he had no business attempting to start the fight game.

CARL SCHURZ.

For a citizen of the United States to spend fifty years in prominence before the public and leave behind him an honored name is unusual and remarkable. Still more remarkable, so remarkable as to be, we believe, without precedent, is for a citizen of foreign birth to accomplish such a result. This is the record of Carl Schurz, who died at the age of 77 years early yesterday morning in his home in New York City. Mr. Schurz was often called erratic, even incoherent, but his bitter enemies never went so far as to say he was not sturdily honest, that he did not have strong convictions and the courage of them.

Carl Schurz was born at Liblar, near Cologne, Prussia, March 2, 1829. As a boy he was actively interested in the politics of his native land, so interested in fact that he was forced to flee from Germany for inciting and taking part in a revolution. In 1851 he came to the United States, settling first in Philadelphia but shortly afterward going to Madison, Wis. He aided in the organization of the Republican party in 1855 and stumped Illinois for Lincoln in the famous Lincoln-Douglas senatorial campaign of 1857.

Schurz was a delegate to the convention that nominated Lincoln for president and had much to do with bringing about that nomination. After the convention he worked actively for Lincoln, speaking in German and in English at many points. Lincoln made him minister to Spain, but a few months after the war broke out Schurz resigned his post and returned to the United States to enter the army. He was given the command of a brigade in Sigel's famous division and because of conspicuous gallantry and ability he was promoted to be a major general within a short time.

After the war Mr. Schurz continued his active interest in politics. In 1869 he was elected United States senator from Missouri. He had been in the senate but two years when he began antagonizing some of the policies of General Grant. The hostility between the men became so pronounced that, in 1872, Schurz presided over the convention that nominated Greeley. He went back into the Republican fold in the next presidential campaign, however, and became secretary of the interior in the Hayes cabinet. In 1880 Mr. Schurz supported Garfield, but in 1884, 1888 and 1892 he was for Cleveland. In 1896 Mr. Schurz again became a Republican, leaving the Democratic party because of the free silver issue. He supported Bryan in 1900, however, and Parker in 1904. He was a strong character, a good fighter, and the country is the loser by his death.

It may be authoritatively stated that neither Benner X. Smith nor E. B. Critchlow will be appointed United States district attorney. The good and sufficient reason is that they are both first-class men.

"Fiddling Bob" Taylor has been nominated for senator from Tennessee over Carmack, which goes to show that in the good old state of Tennessee a gilb tongue and a fiddle are highly regarded by the populace.

The Leavenworth penitentiary now houses both the president and the cashier of a Milwaukee bank. Their fellow convicts had better look out or those fellows will get all their savings.

A certain Mr. Whitney of Massachusetts is no doubt grieving bitterly over the hole our great and good president has gotten himself into.

Senator Tillman seems to have been abundantly loaded. It's a pity Theodore didn't know it before he got busy with his denials.

More than $9,000,000 in gold arrived in the United States from Europe Sunday. If you hurry you may get your share of it.

CAN YOU TWIST A BILL IN TWO?

(Milwaukee Sentinel.)
"The paper that is used by the government in its currency is manufactured by a secret process and has characteristics with which the average man is not familiar," said Arnold Schorer of Minneapolis.
"Recently I was in a small Minnesota town and witnessed an incident that demonstrates this. A well-to-do farmer living in the vicinity came into the bank to transact some business. In the course of the conversation the cashier began twisting a $5 bill. The farmer watched him with interest and finally asked the man back of the counter if he wasn't afraid of tearing the bill.
"Here is an easy way for you to earn money," said the cashier. "Here is a $1,000 bill and I will give it to you if you will twist the bill in two. You are simply to twist it and not tear it."
The farmer seemed dumfounded at first. He was overawed at the thought of mutilating a $1,000 bill. Upon further assurance by the officer of the bank he timidly took the money and started twisting it in the middle. He tugged away for some time without being able to twist the bill in two. Finally he gave up and he was certainly a surprised farmer. It is impossible to twist a bill in two, so firm and elastic is the paper used."

THE KNOT REMINDED HIM.

(Youth's Companion.)
Hiram Bobbe was absent minded. He admitted that himself. Still even he was occasionally surprised by his own fallings. One morning he reached his office unaccountably late. "Dear me," he thought, "where can I have been?"
The answer was not forthcoming. Hiram sat down at his desk and took out his pocket handkerchief. It was tied tight in a knot.
"Now," he exclaimed, "what was that for? Oh, yes, Marthy told me to get my shoes soled."
With an air of resignation to the whims of womanhood he put on his hat, closed his desk, and went out to the "soled while you wait" cobbler's. He went in and sat down, took off his shoes and settled back in a chair to read his newspaper.

"What? Oh, er-er-er-why-oh, yes; want my shoes soled."
"Pardon me, sir," said the cobbler, "but I finished soiling them only half an hour ago. They can't be worn out yet, sir."

NOT A DARNED FOOL.

(Exchange.)
Years ago when telephones were still a novelty, a farmer from the outskirts of Manchester, N. H., came to town one day and called upon a lawyer to twist his now ignited string. The lawyer, Henry E. Burnham, when he supplied with butter, and who had had a telephone recently put in his office?
"Need any butter this morning?" asked the farmer.
"Well, I don't know," answered the lawyer. "Wait a minute. I'll ask my wife about it."
After speaking through the phone, he went on: "No; my wife says no."
The farmer's face was a study for a moment. Then he broke out with: "Look-a-here, Mr. Lawyer, I may be a 'rube' and have my whiskers full of hay and hayseed, but I'm not such a darned fool as to believe that your wife is in that box!"

THE HIGHER CRITICISM.

(American Spectator.)
Cyril Scott, he played at the Belasco theater recently in the "Prince Chap," tells of an old darky down on his knees who is inclined to doubt the biblical account of Daniel in the lion's den.
"Does yo' mean to tell me dat Daniel done jumped into dat den ob lions an' dey didn't eat him up?" he demanded of a colored preacher.
"Ya'as, indeedy," replied the parson. "Dey mus' ha' been circus lions dat had been tamed."
"No, sah. De Bible says dey jus' contrary."
"Whah does it say dat?"
"Dat hit say dat de miracle tuk place 750 B. C.?"
"Ya'as, indeedy, but I'm not such a 'well, hain't B. C. befo' circuses? Huh, nigghah!"

THE NEW SERVANT.

(Chicago Inter Ocean.)
Mrs. Brown had a new servant—a Swede. Hilda whom she was waiting to wait upon the table properly. The girl made such rapid progress that Mrs. Brown decided to give a little test to test Hilda's newly acquired knowledge as waitress.
"Take the dinner progressed successfully, Hilda serving each course correctly as she had been instructed, so that by dessert the first three were the guests of honor, and inquired stolidly: "Want to wash?"

TONGUE TWISTERS.

Some elocutionist has made a collection of more than 200 "tongue-twisters."
"A growing gleam glowing green."
"The bleak breeze blighted the bright broom blossoms."
"Flesh of freshly dried flying fish."
"Six thick thistle sticks."
"Two goods tried to trot to Tedbury."
"Give Grimes Jim's great git gig whip."
"Strict, strong Stephen Stringer snared slyly six sticky silky snakes."
"She stood at the door of Mrs. Smith's fish sauce shop welcoming him in."
The first three are the gems of the collection. It is said to be impossible for any one to repeat them rapidly.
